

AMERICAN WOMEN BUSY

Attempting to solve the many problems French women believe.

PARIS, June 29.—American women seem to be passing through a crisis in restlessly attempting to solve many problems, according to the observation of Madame Avril de Sainte-Croix, head of the French delegation at a recent women's conference in Washington.

"I notice," she said, "that women's educational institutions such as Yassar and Wellesley are giving quite different instruction from that of a generation ago. American women seem eternally to be discussing ethics and platforms."

She was astonished at the first question asked her in America regarding her attitude upon the question of birth control.

"I beg to be excused," she said, "that question is never discussed in France, where a high rate of mortality is needed."

Madame de Sainte-Croix said she found Mrs. Coolidge, the wife of the president, most affable and that she enjoyed greatly a reception given her at the White House and another at the French embassy. She expressed her delight at the hospitality shown her in various cities of the United States and Canada.
