This map; compiled especially for state and government engineers to study the drainage problem of the Lake Okeechobee area, shows clearly the territory visited by President-elect Hoover and party yesterday. The reproduction of the lake area was worked out by C. E. Simmons, former county clerk of Okeechobee county, and P. Pomanscello, ir., member of the strate legislature from Okeechobee. It is scaled to six feet. A copy of the map was given Mr. Hoover before he started on the four of inspection.

glades for the products of the reclaimed section.

As Mr. Hoover concluded the first day of his two-day inspection, he obtained a picture of the possibilities of the development of the Everglades in the form of thousands of acres of sugar cane. Before he went to the home of P. G. Bishop to spend the night he also inspected the mill of the Southern Sugar Company here.
Heading a cavalcade of 20 autos, the next chief executive left his preinaugural home in Belle Isle, Miami Beach, early in the day and made a fast drive to the Everglades district, circling around the north side of the lake. He passed vast stretches of waste land which are unused because they cannot be developed as long as there is the ever present danger of flood.

This evening Mr. Hoover was the president of the Southern Sugar Company; Representative Frank R. Reid, chairman of the flood control committee of the house of representatives; General Jadwin; Glenn B. Skipper, Republican national committeeman for Florida; F. L. Williamson, president, New River, Lake Okeechobee Navigation Association; Col. Mark Brooke, United States District Engineer; Col. L. V. Frazier, United States Army Engineer; Nathan Mayo, Florida commissioner of agriculture; Fred Davis, attorney general; Ernest Amos, state comptroller, and W. V. Knott, state treasurer.

Davis, attorney general; Ernest Amos, state comptroller, and W. V. Knott, state treasurer.

Immediately after passing out of Miami, the next president found plenty of evidences of the devastation wrought by the hurricane last September and in September, 1926, and they were in evidence almost as far north as Okeechobee.

Wrecked houses were scattered along the way and in some instances they were collapsed. Vast stretches of land were laid waste, with trees twisted and broken and debris piled in the fields and along the highways.

As he passed through Moorehaven, where more than 300 persons were drowned in the 1926 flood, Mr. Hoover was greeted by placards placed conspicuously along the roadside calling attention to these deaths; to the fact that the town was flooded and that the rutty road over which he proceeded from Moorehaven to Clewiston had been destroyed in that overflow.

Tomorrow, the president-elect will complete his inspection by proceeding from this town back to Canal Point vit Bellglade and Pahokee. In that district nearly 3,000 persons lost their lives in the storm of last December. The going there is expected to be rather rough, but Mr. Hoover is due at Palm Beach at 1:00 p. m. to have luncheon with Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Burke of Pitts-burgh.
