

VACCINE IS DEVELOPED

French Doctors Claim to Be Able to Prevent Tuberculosis.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Possibilities of a new preventive vaccine for tuberculosis have again roused lively hopes in French medical circles with a report to the Academy of Medicine by Dr. Albert Calmette, subdirector of the Pasteur Institute, of the work of himself and several of his colleagues with a vaccine called BCG.

As a result of research which has been carried out without interruption for the last 20 years, Dr. Calmette and his collaborators have demonstrated that by using as a virus vaccine the living cultures of a bacillus of bovine origin—called by the demonstrators BCG—which have been artificially attenuated or deprived of their tubercular properties, it is possible to confer on young animals, who are free of any pre-existing tuberculosis, a real immunity as regards contamination, either natural or artificially provoked.

Their experiments in the laboratory have furnished them with results which have been constantly favorable, and Dr. Calmette extended his results to experiments on young calves, then on monkeys and finally on newly-born infants. The results have been as satisfactory as could be wished for.

Dr. Calmette asserts that "not one of the children vaccinated in the first three months of 1923 has died from an affection which might have been presumed to be tuberculosis. These infants numbered 108. Ninety-four of them re-examined in 1925 are still in perfect health and their growth has been normal."

"From July 1, 1924, and June 1, 1925, 2,070 newly-born babies have been vaccinated with BCG, which was furnished by the Pasteur Institute. These children have been treated in Belgium and France. I have no record of any untoward incident as a result of these vaccinations, which consist of giving the child three times a day, at intervals of 48 hours, with the vaccine contained in a spoonful of milk."

"Of 137 infants vaccinated between July 1 and December 1, 1924, belonging to families particularly exposed to contagion, not one has died from tuberculosis, although the mortality among unvaccinated children placed in the same surroundings in Paris is 32 per cent."

"The experiments show that the vaccine BCG offers a manifest resistance to infection when applied to monkeys and calves. It seems, then, that one may consider this method of prevention of tuberculosis in young children as one which offers no danger and of the efficacy of which there is no doubt."

SCHOOL TEACHER'S LUCK.
Fifty-two years ago a North Carolina pedagogue was persuaded to accept a small piece of land in Florida in payment of a tuition fee of $500 for a pupil from that state. Going to Florida recently to investigate he found that his land was located in a boom section and before the day was over he sold it for $10,000.

1778 IRON BRIDGE USED

First of Such Span Was Over River Severn.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The first iron bridge in the world was from bridge, in Shropshire, which spans the River Severn. The work was put in hand and the various parts cast in 1778 at the Centrosele Iron Works, the proprietor of which, Abraham Darby, was the designer of the structure.

Approximately 500 tons of iron were used in the construction of the bridge. A remarkable feature of the undertaking is that all the castings are keyed together, no welding or screws having been used.

The roadway, which is 24 feet wide, has an iron foundation, upon which is laid a few inches of clay, which in its turn is covered by the usual road metalling forming the surface. The main arch has a span of 100 feet.

WHAT'S A NAME FOR.
A man rushed into an old furniture store.

"What do you want?" asked the proprietor.

"Is this a second-hand store?" asked the man.

"Can't you see it's a second-hand store?"

"Well, I want a second hand for my watch."—Good Hardware.

FISHERMEN DEFENDED

Statesmen, Scientists, Philosophers Are Among Those Who Praise Rod.

ELKHART, Ind., Aug. 8.—The fisherman need not be ashamed of his hobby, says The Elkheart Truth, in a recent issue. Acquaintances may ridicule him as an enthusiast or a prevaricator. But his is an ancient art. Sufficient books have been written on the subject to stock a library. The notabilities of the world have followed it. The secondary title of Walton's angling classic is "The Compleat Angler's Recreation." Statesmen and scientists, preachers and philosophers, great men and those not great are its devotees. It was said of Webster that in built and debate he was equally persuasive. His famous passage on the surviving veterans of Bunker Hill was composed while fishing on Marshfield canal. Eloquence, wisdom, health and statesmanship owe much to quiet hours by lake or river.

Among the forms of recreation that have been devised there is none cheaper, more healthful or stimulating. There is more to fishing than catching fish, a statement attributed to President Cleveland, which all good fishermen readily accept. It stores the mind with refreshing sights and sounds. It is not a stupid sport—that depends on luck rather than on art and intelligence. It requires a wit and delicacy that produces pleasure apart from the success or failure that comes from their practice.

The preservation and stocking of the fishing waters of the state is today an important function. They are sources of wealth and recreation. Departments of conservation are using the resources of science in the production of fish and game. Indiana has now five fish hatcheries for restocking in order that this sport of the people may continue. Such organizations as the Izaak Walton League are dedicated to comprehensive conservation programs for the preservation of outdoor America. It believes that recreation is a legitimate part of life, education and development. There is no pleasure so beguiling to millions of Americans as the call of the open season.

WELL DEFINED.

"What's this word, pa?" asked Willie, pointing it out in his book.

"Phenomenon," replied pa.

"Well, what is that?"

"That, my son, is what you would be if you never disturbed your father with questions."—Washington Post.

THE TACTFUL HOSTESS.

At a party the husband of one of the guests arrived very late.

"I have come to take my wife home," he explained.

"Oh, my dear Mr. Blank," said the hostess, "why didn't you come sooner?"—Continued.
